Hawaii Calls

Your Program of Hawaii—Broadcast Weekly from the Banyan Court, Moana Hotel, Waikiki Beach, Honolulu, Hawaii, U.S.A., by Station KGMB—via the Mutual and Canadian Broadcasting Systems

* * * * *

THIS souvenir greeting—sent at your request—brings to you the aloha of Al Perry and his Singing Surf-Riders, Clara Inter, Victoria Ii, the Waikiki Girls, and all the people of Hawaii.

These pictures were taken at the very edge of Waikiki—one of the many beautiful beaches that line the shores of all Hawaii's islands. Your broadcast comes to you from Honolulu (capital of the Territory of Hawaii, and situated on the Island of Oahu), and frequently from other principal islands of the Hawaiian group—Kauai to the North; Maui and Hawaii to the South . . . all connected by daily airplane service, by steamers plying among them twice a week or oftener, and by radio telephone communication faster than that of the average Mainland city.

This is the Hawaii we sing and tell you about every Saturday—these are the islands with the native charm of olden days, yet with every modern aid to comfortable, pleasant living.

An aerial photograph of the Wireless Station at Pearl Harbor. The image shows a large complex of multi-story buildings with light-colored roofs, situated on a flat, open area. Three prominent, tall, lattice-structured antenna towers are visible, spaced out across the background. In the foreground, there is a body of water, possibly a lagoon or bay, with some rocky outcrops and sparse vegetation. A row of smaller, white, tent-like structures is visible between the main buildings and the water. The overall scene is captured in a sepia-toned, historical style.
